

Radnor are delighted to welcome Holly Ha

An Archaeology graduate from Durham University with first-class honours, Holly has a strong interest in environmental factors and the materiality and impact of corporate ESG commitments. Her dissertation included interpretation of corporate ESG data and ratings, sustainability and impact, and emissions reports.

Holly worked as a Research Analyst during her studies and supported research teams on-site. She has seen first-hand the damage to excavation sites caused by unsustainable commercial development and was able to aid in reversing the damage, using ESG driven data. Holly has worked in an ESG advisory position with several Middle Eastern governments, where she used her strong research and analytical skills to gather disparate sources of information and data to help monitor and advise on long-term strategic ESG planning.

Holly's passion and interest in corporate ESG responsibilities and reporting will be invaluable to Radnor, assisting our Client Directors in providing impactful and relevant advice to clients as they seek to navigate the increasingly complex and opaque ESG landscape. Holly is perfectly placed to make viable suggestions to boost ESG credentials based on their business operations, financial performance, impact and where they are in the corporate life cycle.
